MTG launches the new LHD Lip System for underground mining

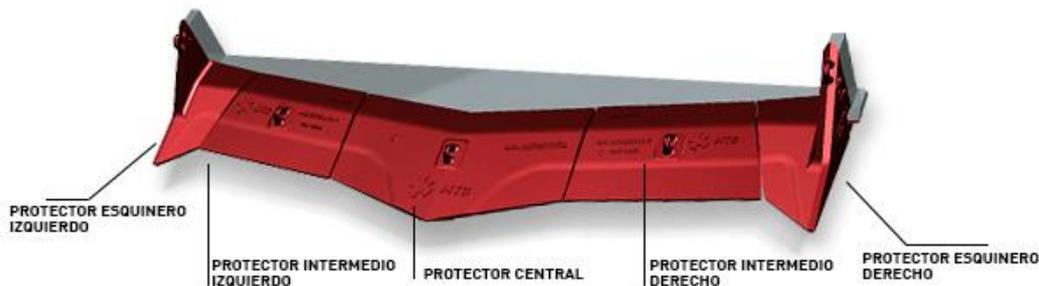

The new welded lip shrouds are specifically designed to maximize bucket penetration for Load-Haul-Dump (LHD) loaders in underground mines.

MTG today has announced the launching of a new complete bucket protection system for loaders in underground mines, the LHD Lip System, that has been tested with excellent results Canadian and Portuguese mines. This welded system comes with an ultra-slim design that optimizes bucket penetration and reliability, increasing machine productivity and operational time. Thanks to that, this shroud is capable of reducing fuel and pneumatic consumption, compared with mechanical protectors, providing a great competitive advantage for the user.

Designed and manufactured in Europe, LHD Lip System is produced with the new steel alloy, MET40LH, developed to the strictest quality controls (including AOD process control) to maximize the hardness and protection of the bucket without losing the weldability of steel.

Other advantages this system offers are the shroud self-sharpening design, which increases its wear life, as well as installation versatility in any bucket width.

Currently, MTG has its welded LHD Lip System for loader buckets with a thickness of 38mm 1.5". A version of the LHD shrouds with more wear material at the lower part is foreseen for more abrasive applications during the coming year, as well as a hammerless system during 2017.

About MTG

MTG is an international company specializing in the use of state-of-the-art technology for the design and production of innovative GET systems for earthmoving machinery.

We have a presence in the world's main markets in the mining, construction and dredging sectors, and we operate through more than 300 distributors that are present in over 60 countries.

Family owned and with two main offices (Barcelona and Houston), MTG guarantees the highest standards of service to all its customers.
